

Private and public lawyers: An Ethical divide?

Date: Wednesday 11 May 2022
 Time: 5.30pm – 7:30pm AEST
 Place: ACT Supreme Court
 Court Room 3
 6 Knowles Place, Canberra

This event will discuss current ethical and related issues for lawyers, and whether these are different for private and public lawyers. It will be of particular interest to private legal practitioners, government lawyers, academic lawyers and students. Registration is essential and the audience is limited to 100. This event will not be streamed, it is an in-person only public event. Masks will be required to be worn.

At the conclusion of the discussion refreshments will be served.

The Australian Academy of Law is delighted to host this event, chaired by the Hon Alan Robertson SC

The speakers will be

Elizabeth Carroll, President of the ACT Law Society, formerly Chief Legal Counsel, IP Australia, and now a partner at Holding Redlich.

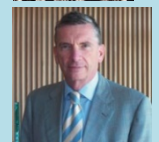

Dr Jennifer Duxbury, Digital Industry Group, formerly in-house lawyer at bodies such as Ninemsn, Lonely Planet and Airservices Australia, and an expert in lawyers and public policy.

Professor Vivien Holmes, ANU College of Law, teaches and researches in the fields of legal ethics, legal education and the legal profession and has worked as a litigation solicitor in private and government practice.

Michael Kingston, Australian Government Solicitor, formerly Chief Legal Officer of the Australian Securities and Investments Commission and a partner at Mallesons Stephen Jaques.
